Princess Mary exposed! It's the crown jewels as people have never seen them, and the Danish royal family would have liked it to stay that way!

The Danish royal family are said to be infuriated with an artist over his sexually explicit painting of Prince Frederik and Princess Mary.

Painted by Denmark-based anti-royalist Marcos Byrd, the shocking portrait shows the future king and queen fully naked, laughing with each other as they enjoy a day at the beach.

The image has caused outrage among royal circles, with the princess said to be distraught at the way in which she has been painted.

The shocking portrait of Mary and Frederik

'She's shocked an artist can paint something so personal,' a palace insider says. 'An unflattering portrait is one thing, but this is intrusive to say the least. She's not happy.'

Indeed, the painting has been deemed so scandalous that Marcos says a gallery in Odense, Denmark, has decided to censor it - and has encouraged him to paint some pants on the pair.

It's an unwelcome scandal for Mary (37) and Frederik (41), who have been plagued by bad publicity this year.

They came under fire a few months ago for their extravagant spending in order to maintain their jetsetting lifestyle. And a controversial book recently claimed their marriage was under strain because of Frederik's playboy ways.

But Marcos is shocked by this new scandal. 'I can't see what all the fuss is about,' he says.

'In my painting there is no sex act, violence or the least hint of meanness.' The palace wasn't available for comment.
